Biography

I obtained my medical degree from the Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB) in 2017, before specializing in urology. I then expanded my skills in pelvi-perineology, neuro-urology, and andrology through a fellowship at Pitié-Salpêtrière Hospital (Paris, France), along with several inter-university diplomas. My academic path has also been enriched by research projects and publications in these specific areas.

I am currently a urology resident at Erasme Hospital and also hold the position of clinical assistant at the Faculty of Medicine at ULB.

My approach to urology is founded on patient-centered care, integrating the latest technologies. I work alongside a team of specialists, each an expert in their field, who collaborate closely to provide high-quality care and are committed to continuous professional development and knowledge improvement.
